Free fun not limited to young

San Antonio Children's Museum was packed Sunday as the downtown attraction granted free admission to grandparents and their grandchildren. The occasion, which drew about 400 grandparents and grandkids, was National Grandparents Day, which has been observed in the U.S. on the first Sunday after Labor Day since 1978. For the second straight year, the event at the museum on East Houston Street was underwritten by WellMed Charitable Foundation.

Robert Williams rests as grandson Joseph Prather, 8, waits to play games at the museum.
